

the specialty of those products and services, and some engaging content to present why your company is exclusive. A LinkedIn company page is essentially the gateway for your brand. Therefore, you need to do your best to make it so that it can reach a wider audience of LinkedIn users.

Upload the company logo and a banner image to make your page stand out. The banner image must be eye-catching. In addition, add a stunning background image that can convey a key message on your page. Tailor the content of page in such a way so that your audiences finds it interesting and helpful. You may design your page as a forum of discussion as well as a place of industry talk. Your main object should be engagement, which indirectly advertises your company. Instead of directly focusing on the products and services, the page content should focus in solving problems or in helping the target audiences in some way.

Create LinkedIn showcase pages for the products or services you want to promote. Update your LinkedIn profile on a regular basis – review your LinkedIn presence on a certain days' intervals in order to ensure your profile is updated at all times. Optimize your LinkedIn profile, photo, and URL so that your LinkedIn profile helps you to make a strong first impression with your prospects and connections.

Lead generation

This is a well-known fact that LinkedIn is the most affluent network for B2B organizations, and the main focus of any B2B organization is lead generation. Let us see what lead generation is. Any organization must follow a process and perform some activities to identify and populate its potential customers. This is called lead generation. Some percentage of these potential customers or leads are converted into actual or paying customers. If you find the percentage is too small, you need to struggle. That is why lead generation is so important. And in today's competitive and crowded marketplaces, lead generation becomes a major challenge for the companies.

Different companies use different strategies for this, but there must be some well-defined processes in place where a balance between quality and quantity is needed. More leads do not guarantee more actual customers. In reality, only a fraction of leads is converted into paying customers. This brings a critical requirement – qualified lead generation. For this LinkedIn is the suitable platform because if you have a quality audience then only the quality leads can be generated.