The best way to stay connected with your target audiences is to create a LinkedIn group that is relevant to your field of interest. A LinkedIn group offers a common place for professionals who are in the same industry or who have similar interests. In the group, they make contacts, share problems, find solutions, post and view jobs. This way, they establish themselves as industry experts.

LinkedIn allows you to create your own groups or join any number of groups that focus on your area of expertise or interest. Instead of creating a new group, you can also join other groups and communities that are related to your business. In those groups, you can participate in discussions, take a note to what your target audience is discussing, address those problems, and recommend suitable solutions that your company can provide. If you find potential customers in the group and develop connections with those customers, you can send them messages through LinkedIn InMail and start building a long-term relationship with them.

You can also create ads and campaigns on LinkedIn to reach your ideal customers. As a LinkedIn customer, you can add LinkedIn Insight Tag to your company's website to enable in-depth campaign reporting, to track conversion, unlock valuable insights about your website visitors, and the members interacting with your ads. The LinkedIn Insight Tag enables collecting data regarding members' visits to your website. This data includes the URL, IP address, referrer, timestamp, page views, and more.

LinkedIn does not share any personal information with the website owner; it only provides aggregated reports about the website audience and ad performance. Sponsored Content allows an advertiser to distribute company updates to targeted LinkedIn members outside of their Company Page visitors and followers. If you want to drive more leads and engage your target audience by sending personalized, private messages directly to their LinkedIn inboxes, you can use the Sponsored InMail feature of LinkedIn. Your target audience will view your Sponsored InMail messages while they are working anywhere on a LinkedIn desktop or engaged anywhere on a LinkedIn mobile. Sponsored InMail messages need to be purchased by you on a cost-per-send basis.

Therefore, LinkedIn can be used as a doorway to your brand. It helps people to create perception about the work of your company and help them
