

Now, what's interesting with WhatsApp is that there is no clear audience-profile for it. It's not like you can see one age-group, economic class, or social class dominating this spectrum of the internet space; they are all there and are fairly difficult to separate from the others. This is because almost every smartphone-owner, from a teenager to a senior citizen, and from one with the basic smartphone to those with the latest ones costing lakhs of rupees, use this messaging platform daily. It simply means that this platform accommodates all age groups from all economic backgrounds, which can be clearly seen with the consideration that more than 1.5 billion people use this service from 180 countries in the world.

Although we have seen several apps over the years trying to replicate the model of WhatsApp, none of them has reached the heights that this platform has reached. Some of the worthy competitors over the years include Line, We Chat, Telegram, Hike and Facebook Messenger to name a few.

To make this even more interesting, let's look at some facts that show the real power WhatsApp has when it comes to product marketing.

- WhatsApp has around 1.5 Billion Active users, of which more than 70% check it at least once a day
- 1 Billion people use the application daily
- The average WhatsApp user checks the application 23 times a day
- 58% of the users check WhatsApp several times a day
- The number of WhatsApp users in the USA alone is predicted to grow to 25.6 million by 2021

Image Source: <https://www.businessofapps.com/data/whatsapp-statistics/>

Most prevalent messaging app around the world