

- WhatsApp is the third most-downloaded application on the Google Play store
- Around 3 million companies use the WhatsApp Business tool
- WhatsApp only trails behind Facebook and YouTube in terms of the number of accounts.
- India is the biggest market for WhatsApp with 300 million regular users

The numbers given above are simply amazing; these again reaffirm WhatsApp as the best way to reach your audience unless your audience belongs to one of those countries where WhatsApp is banned. These 7 countries are namely China, Iran, Syria, UAE, Bangladesh, North Korea, Cuba.

The previous image is a map of countries as per research was done by HootSuite showing their preferred messenger app, you can figure out what a dominant status WhatsApp has in the world with 133 Countries under its portfolio.

Profiling through WhatsApp groups

Even though it seems that WhatsApp is a big mixture consisting of all types of audiences, it's also fair to say that you can separate that audience personally by forming what we call WhatsApp groups, the only condition being that you should have their contact info and that they should be comfortable in being added to that particular group.

Personalising Audience-Interaction using WhatsApp Business

If you are looking to personalise your interaction with your customers, then WhatsApp Business is the way to go. Once a customer or a potential customer gets in touch, you can always add the personal touch while talking through them, either the bots or your Customer Handle, or even you can very well take care of your customer's needs. Interestingly, out of the various testimonials that WhatsApp Business has received, the personalization of things is the first positive point from the side of companies as well as of customers.

The Future

Now that we know what WhatsApp offers its service at present in terms of Audience profiling, let us have a look at what the future might hold.

It has been announced that WhatsApp plans to include advertising in WhatsApp Stories by 2020. This means businesses will be able to advertise