

reaching the highest number of active users on a single platform daily. It's a potential game-changer, especially for a business that has a kind of resources that allow them to have an extensive marketing budget which can be put to use here.

With this planned update, your reaching out to your potential audience is simply going to increase with some investment while the potential for returns seems uniquely high considering the current WhatsApp user statistics especially amongst the low-income strata in countries like India where almost 1/4th of the population is now active WhatsApp users.

WhatsApp Analytics

One major part of marketing, regardless of the platform you use, is the analytics and while analytics for social media sites like Facebook and Instagram are readily available and interpretable, you might feel a lack of it when it comes to your marketing campaigns on WhatsApp. Under this topic, we'll talk about various aspects of WhatsApp analytics, and how you can access them, interpret them and implement them in your WhatsApp marketing campaign.

Interpreting and making changes to your content

For starters, WhatsApp Business Account gives you the leverage of using some basic statistics.

These statistics include really basic things like how many messages were sent by you over some time, how many of them were delivered and how many of them were read by your audience. Now, it is not much but you can still interpret if your content is making an impact on your audience or if your audience is too disinterested in your content even to open it.

In case you need a detailed review and analysis of your messages and chats with the potential clients you engage with on WhatsApp you can always use third-party applications like Chat Visualizer, Chatilyzer, Analyzer for WhatsApp by WhatsApp, WhatsAnalyzer and so on. These applications and sites will give you an in-depth knowledge about how your messages are being received and treated, as to where you fail while delivering and engaging your audience, and what are the highlights of your WhatsApp marketing campaign(as numbers suggest) and so on. This data will help you shape a well-thought-out marketing plan that will get refined as time goes by and you get to know how your audience reacts to a certain type of content.
