

overnight on social media platforms and since connecting and engaging with most people primarily occurs through these platforms, one achieves whatever one's target is, with a social media presence that might even be totally antagonistic to how one practically is in real life.

Life and interaction are virtually incomplete without social media platforms these days. The pros outweigh the cons of being on social media platforms by a huge margin.

As discussed earlier, though originally intended just for connecting with friends, acquaintances and like-minded people. The AI of social media platforms have evolved a lot. They have transformed the basic connecting medium into a multi-faceted catering service now. With excess of entertainment options provided on the go, social media platforms provide the online public with information and relevant news and even discussion threads where it is possible to share views and perspectives on practically anything.

Social media and Marketing

Social media platforms have also evolved into sleek marketing tools. Since creating an online existence on social media can be done with ease, it is thus exceedingly simple to market that formed existence and whatever products or services are available.

But each social media platform is unique in its own way. Each has its own dedicated base of the online audience who engage with whatever options are provided by those platforms and reap the benefits out of them. If properly manipulated, a customer base can also be identified out of the dedicated base of the online audience that a particular social media platform thrives on. The customers can thus be influenced into buying the products or services and even the subscription of various entertainment options can be done. But the sellers need to identify the proper social media platform that they can align with to perform their business successfully and garner financial benefits.

Business owners that extend their marketing domains over a multitude of social media platforms are often left befuddled over the choice of the perfect social media platform that they require to be in and are often scrambling everywhere for options. Though it is imperative, having a very traditional offline approach to business is archaic these days and every marketing maestro targets the social media platforms as effective marketing tools; it also asserts the need to align with the perfect social media platform whose attributes provide leverage and distinction to that particular business.