

Time to Publish

We talk you through the process of preparing code for your app before publishing

Publishing is perhaps the most important step that need to take during app development. This is the stage which makes your application available to the general public to download on their devices and use.

When you publish an application on either the AppleApp Store or Google Play Store, you need to perform two main tasks:-

- During the app preparation for release step, you need to build a release version of the app which users can download and install on their devices.
- You need to release the application to the users. During the release step, you start to publicise, sell and also try and distribute the release version of the application to users.