

Call of Duty: Mobile is an eclectic fusion of every Call of Duty game released including the characters, their weaponry, their accessories, game-play, and maps.

The game features different modes: Multiplayer, Zombies, and the Battle Royale. The multiplayer mode has quite a few classic Call of Duty re-runs including much-loved weapons that have been a staple in every Call of Duty video game released. No new maps have been revealed, all the maps in Call of Duty: Mobile are previously showcased maps, like Hijacked, Nuketown, Crash and Firing Range.

Cyber Hunter

Cyber Hunter is a Chinese science fiction Battle Royale game developed and released by NetEase. The game was announced as Project: Battle by NetEase in May of 2018 and was released globally on the 26th of April, 2019.

The game is centred on the staple Battle Royale theme with a few distinctive elements. The players in the game are referred to as Wanderers and are dropped down on a map. A hundred Wanderers now battle face to face to stay alive. As the players wander, they are tasked with finding weapons, equipment, vehicles and other items that could be of use.

In addition to this, as you level up, you can also get hold of certain powers that enable you to sense power moves and signals of your enemies, grant the power of invisibility and also help you in building barricades. You can also destroy buildings and use your powers to operate spy drones.

Weaponry in Cyber Hunter comes with customisable upgrades. The weapons in this game work quite differently from your usual run of the mill
