

difference is the absence of the queen. You need to pot all the pieces and score the highest. The second mode is the Carrom mode. It is the one we are used to playing. The same rules apply here and of course, the fight for the queen is a big one. The third mode is the Freestyle mode. When playing in the Freestyle mode, you can choose either Disc Pool or Carrom. The concept is the same. For Freestyle Disc Pool one would have to score 180 points to win the game and for Carrom, it is 160. Whoever scores first wins the match! Lastly, the Practice Mode is basically an offline mode.

This game has extremely easy controls. To place the striker you just have to swipe either left or right and then you can get to aiming and power which is another swipe. The makers did a good job with graphics and the user interface. Another fascinating aspect is the Equipment shop in the game where you can find cool strikers that are not just quirky but give better results in the game. The one thing that is different in it than other games is the flexibility of the chat option. You do have some sentences to choose from during the match but you don't get the freedom to write anything personal as there is no chat bar. All in all this game takes us back to our childhood days so, let the nostalgia begin!

Darts of Fury

This game is made by the talented UK-based company Yakuto. Darts of Fury is most likely one of the best dart games out there. It is a pretty straightforward and it takes you directly to the main screen to start the game but
