

information carries hints about upcoming subplots that you can use to your advantage as well.

You will encounter situations along the way, in which you will have to choose the best option... you may end up with a little extra pounds (English money), or you could even get locked up in a city for two days when time is of the essence.

To complete the mission, you will have to travel through 148 cities. The challenging part is this: you have to find the right boat on time, the boat may leave after a few days, a spontaneous riot could cause hassles, there may be a change of route, will you be able to decipher the information you get from the locals to your advantage?

Eighty days is packed with surprises and strategies. The sounds and visuals keep you hooked to the game.

Ryan North's To Be Or Not To Be:

Tin Man Games' To Be Or Not To Be – Ryan North is an adaptation of Shakespeare's Hamlet, an interactional game in which you can choose which character of the play you can want to be.

Different characters such as Hamlet, Ophelia, or Hamlet Sr., have different but unique powers. You can create your plot by doing things in the game that are not a part of the original plot.

There are hundreds of outcomes that you can face depending on the choices you make! How interesting can you make your plot to be? To make matters more interesting, you have to discover your powers to make use of

