

However, how can you ensure not getting lost in a sea of content creators on the platform, especially if you are a newbie? Well, to be able to gain celebrity status here, you need to have a streamlined strategy that begins with the little homework of identifying and, of course, picking your very own niche.

Identifying a Niche

• Nature of a TikTok Video

Before identifying and picking a niche, it is important to understand the nature of the content on the platform in a more detailed manner. The content is as we know is audio-visual. Although these videos are very short in length, they need to be immensely catchy and should grab the attention of the viewers easily.

Thus, it makes it easier for users to connect with each other in a very precise manner. More importantly, this is the ultimate app for a generation with a shrinking attention span.

The app allows a lot of flexibility and customisability. The content on the app is not only interactive but also well made because of the ease of its interface.

While video making is a serious business, this app democratises the process by allowing non-professionals to create top-notch videos with its pre-loaded editing options.

These features help us understand the fundamental idea behind the content on the platform. They are supposed to be creative, glossy, witty and crisp. Having found what is at the heart of TikTok we should go into
