

the intricacies of analysing and gauging the targeted audience and its preferences to better identify a niche.

● Understanding the Audience

Only knowing your content, in theory, is not enough. To make your mark on the platform, you should understand the pulse of the audience. And the best way to do this is by spending your time on the platform.

You should follow the trends and notice the features of trending videos and all that goes with them. Especially, the right hashtags which are trending can give you a lot of ideas as to what exactly takes a particular video to the top of the list.

Moreover, it is essential for you to engage with other creators to be able to weave the perfect content for your followers. Thus, it is essential to start learning from the good work that already exists out there.

These are people who have already managed to make a bond with the audience and by following their work you can understand what the public wants. They do not necessarily have to be inspirations for your work, but certainly, they can be a great indicator of the audience's tastes and preferences.

Later, when you have a larger audience base, you can easily shift to a pro account that will cut down your manual labour significantly. It will allow you to use the analytics feature to track your audience. This feature enables you to get the metrics of your follower base like the gender split and region-wise distribution of the followers to name a few. Thus, it will help you figure out the kind of content suitable for this audience, and customize it for the followers you have. Moreover, by knowing the locations from where your audience comes from, you will
