

content, according to him, is on topics other than entertainment. This is the driving force. Educational video makers like Josh Talks have signed up for using the app to reach out to larger audiences.

Dr Animesh is another famous creator on the platform. He tries to disseminate information on healthy living. His target audiences are people from small towns in India and rural areas. He states that these are the areas where the health services are the most inadequate with health facilities often causing infections themselves. Therefore, he wants to use this platform to make people aware of these pitfalls.

TikTok is catering to the needs of many Indians looking to learn soft skills like English as well. It is also providing a space for people willing to teach these skills.

Motivational speakers are also featured on this platform. Actress and singer Sophie Choudry has begun hosting a chat show called 'Work It Up' on the platform recently, focusing on fitness and lifestyle. She has said that the 15 to 30 seconds format works much better in terms of conveying the point across compared to long videos, which people do not sit through.

Moreover, since a large part of the viewers come from Tier II and Tier III cities, there is a predominance of vernacular content on the platform which can also be a particular niche that can be captured by newcomers.