

Promotional Content

Individuals and organisations making educational videos are not the only dominant force on the platform. There are several kinds of organisations including, media houses, e-commerce platforms, and niche food businesses all across the world trying to promote their products, taking advantage of the great reach of the platform.

Governmental or transnational entities like the UN International Fund for Agriculture and Development have also started marketing themselves on the platform.

The American, National Basketball Association (NBA) has also been involved in running official TikTok accounts to create value for their product. They give highlights of games or updates for the followers via their TikTok account creating chances for engagement.

Parting Words

This was neither an exhaustive directory of the kind of content available on the platform nor a comprehensive guide to producing top-notch content for the platform.

However, it was certainly an attempt to give you a flavour of the various aspects of the content on TikTok and a sense of the possibilities held by a platform that has revolutionised audio-visual formats and has become one of the most popular apps in the world.