

result-driven growth-hacking strategy will go a long way in enabling you to promote your individual or commercial brand in an effortless manner. For the same, you may draw inspiration from official Tik Tok account 'AdidasNeo'. By partnering with local celebrities who personify the personas of the target buyers of Adidas, the brand successfully promotes a stylish yet effortless lifestyle among its target audiences. The brand uploads tutorials on video-making, outfit-coordination and hip-hop dancing.

Try out in-house production

Instead of the continual struggle of chase influencers while worrying about budget, you may want to try out in-house production. Yes, it may seem like a daunting task but if planned correctly, it can deliver top-notch results with minimum fuss. You need to remember that originality, no matter in what form, is sufficient to win the hearts. Leverage the USP of the originality of TikTok and without any hesitation, start creating videos without bothering too much about polished content. If you have done well in a few videos, do not hesitate to turn to your friends and family to gain valuable inputs, get hold of helping hand and of course, required resources.

Drive an offline engagement through creative ideas

After being underrated for an extended period, offline engagement has recently emerged as one of the most cost-effective growth-hacking strategies. Whether you have commercial products or services or a talent, all you need to do is to encourage your target audiences to come up with a DIY idea in the context of the product and service experience or your talent. Be assured that this strategy will be enthusiastically embraced by creative minds that are eager to showcase a glimpse of their innate talent and creativity to the world. Looking for inspiration? What can be a better example than 'Haidilao'? There is a lot to learn from this brand about how to monetise positive target user experi-

