

- Geography Mix – Though TikTok is known to be a Chinese app, it has reached millions across the globe and has become an international sensation. The popularity is not only restricted to Asian countries but also equally well-known in Western countries. The US accounts for 5% of the user base with 26.5 million monthly active users. The new user base is also growing exponentially. The popularity of the app is no less in India with 43% new users from the Indian subcontinent.
- Average Daily Time Spent – This insight is of great use for social media marketing. Average 52 minutes (Source: BusinessofApps, 2019) are spent daily on the app with multiple logins. Login time of each session can also be tracked which is of great advantage for social media marketers to connect with the audience. The data will help understand the preferred timing of the audience so that the content can instantly attract customers. Marketing managers can publish the content during peak traffic time to achieve more viewership of ad campaigns.

- Average number of daily video views: Over 1 billion videos are viewed each day on TikTok. This means along with the popularity of the app, developers need to be proactive and develop infrastructure to handle humongous traffic on the site and creators need to bring innovative and engaging content everyday to keep the audience engagement consistent.
- Engagement Index – It determines the percentage of monthly users that open the app every day. At 29%, engagement rate of TikTok is lower as compared to other social media platforms. This highlights that though TikTok is most downloaded app but audience engagement is at much
