

lower level compared to other social media platforms like Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, etc

All these and many more data points when compiled and researched together bring meaningful insights to plan business development programs. Many industries are testing marketing strategies through TikTok since the start of 2019. Companies have led significant emphasis on social media analytics which has different layers of hidden information.

One such layer consists of Audience Analysis which involves collecting information of the audience which is shared by them and researching the data to get consumer insights which are demographics as well as psychographics. Psychographic information can be people's likes, dislikes, beliefs and values. This helps to develop customer segmentation and differentiation for brand awareness as well as R&D purposes for product development. The eye to detail of consumer behaviour based on demographics and psychographics can bring in great value to every aspect of business.

TikTok is all about sharing content rather than following others unlike other social media platforms hence audience analysis is of primary relevance. “TikTok for you” feed shares content that users may like. This can be of great advantage for social media marketers who are aiming to create brand awareness to identify and influence customers. This marketing strategy is known as influencer marketing. TikTok has all features to provide advantage of influencer marketing. Universal Pictures has adapted influencer marketing campaign on TikTok to promote the premiere of the movie release – The House with a Clock in its walls.
