

percentage from it. This can be a long term sustainable model which can help boost profits, revenue and penetration of the app.

Developing an application is one thing and sustaining is quite another. There have been many popular names like Orkut and Yahoo in the social media world which had attained milestones even ahead of times but were unable to sustain the evolution phase of computers to laptops and handheld devices to smart phones.

Analytics plays a major role for these businesses to innovate and function successfully by helping them adapt and align strategies to the ever-changing consumer behaviour. Social media innovations are possible by creatively involving people and building intimate relationships with their customers. TikTok - the quirky content sharing app has struck the right cord by giving people the avenue to create, innovate and share content. The future will be a testament to whether the app can compete with social media giants and be an everlasting success story! 