

in real life. You can choose to be an influencer in the area of beauty care or the field of technology, and no one is going to stop you. However, you must possess some level of expertise or knowledge in the field you choose.

Of late, there have been numerous cases of brand deals that are left undisclosed. Once the cover was blown, the influencers received a lot of flak from their followers. Whatever you do, do it with utmost honesty, and then only you will give yourself a chance to sustain for long.

Selling your products/merchandise

TikTok is an excellent platform, especially for youth-based merchandise. You can promote your products for free and help them to reach the millennials and Gen Z individuals on TikTok. However, do not use it as the primary source of selling your merch. Instead, use it just as a secondary medium.

Do you want to know which businesses and products are allowed? Anything and everything legal can be promoted without worrying about any legal consequences unless you cross the line.

Say that you are a scriptwriter and sell your scripts as a freelancer. What you can do is write some short texts and enact those for your TikTok family. If you are good at it, people will share your work, and it will eventually reach a consumer who is willing to value your work. If you are not confident about acting, you can ask your friends or even hire people to do the same on your behalf.

As we have already mentioned, everything sells. You have to be smart to employ means which will help them sell. Another way is you can directly create videos explaining what makes your product different from the rest