

The creators involved in the marketing campaign TikTok requested followers to download the TikTok app to engage in the competition “Enjoy the Taste.” The subtitles tagged Instagram’s official account @tiktok and used the #SavorTheFlavor hashtag. Some posts have made the supported essence of the content evident by the “paid alliance” mark of Instagram while others have used the #ad hashtag in the subtitles.

The other method of effective usage of Tik Tok is User Engagement. User engagement in the TikTok marketing strategy is the most open and engaging form of advertisement. User-generated content is primarily used to support causes and brands through instruments and apps that simplify and make it possible for users to post ideas and content by recognising trend topics and brands. Let’s look into the ad work of the Chinese Haidilao restaurant in order to understand this idea. The restaurant has introduced a DIY menu option, where you can choose a dish and shoot the way the food has been made and what ingredients are being used.

Infeed ads are also a great way of pitching campaigns on TikTok. Imagine having a full-screen video of your brand on TikTok. However, the users are attracted to original content more than to advertisements. Therefore, sometimes a company needs to encourage influencers to make videos that reflect the sponsor’s product or how to use it. Once more, it works only if the influencer is the type of person who uses the material. There is little value in an influencer promoting a product that doesn’t fit their usual material. A young influencer who usually does make-up tutorials will not be able to effectively market hearing aids or retirement homes.

Understanding the Tik Tok Market

One thing that has changed with the growth of popularity on the platform is that the types of videos that people share are more diverse. It’s not
