

Various brands, artists, and celebrities are subscribing to this app and getting some major benefits. How? Well, we list down some facts about the app and you will know that abundance of audience you can have:

1. TikTok has been downloaded over 500 million times on Android alone and a large chunk are active users
2. Over the years, the growth of audience is 275%
3. Average usage time is 52 minutes per day
4. 41% of users on this app belong to the age group of 16 to 24 years and they are the target audience for most brands and products

When the statistics speak for themselves, you don't need us to tell you how this app is going to help shape your marketing strategies. Here are some of the best practices you can familiarise yourself with to turn into an artist or build a renowned brand out of an unknown, registered company name.

Research and post

Firstly, you need to be aware of your niche and the type of content you can post on the portal. Once you have done that, the next step is to score big on your research section. The moment you get into it, you will realize that people are posting similar posts and it gets monotonous to see indistinguishable content on the web. Hence, you need to come up with unique and remarkable content that is relatable as well.

Creating video content isn't as easy as you might think. We hear people mocking teenagers for having an abundance of time at their disposal. However, these critics are the ones who spend hours of their day watching these videos made by tremendously talented teenagers.