

To enable you to do this simultaneously, browsers have the feature where you can actually open multiple tabs and get going. Although this is mostly true for your computer, since YouTube functions a little differently on your phone, the features of the web browser remain very much the same otherwise. Mozilla Firefox, too, has this feature. However, there is something related to tab management that is unique to Firefox alone. We shall take a look at that in a moment.

2. Bookmark options:

When you browse the internet, you might come across some interesting things which you might want to save for future reference. Now, that can be done quite easily using the bookmark option. Almost all web browsers have this facility and Firefox is no different.

3. Private browsing mode:

This is a pretty interesting thing to talk about irrespective of the browser concerned. The private browsing mode, often known as the incognito mode, has come into a lot of use these days. Typically, if you do not wish to leave behind a history of the websites that you have visited, you can use the incognito or the private browsing mode. Almost all browsers have incorporated this and offer this very useful facility to their customers. Mozilla Firefox is no exception.
