

Common Features of Chrome

Many of us use chrome browser almost every day but are still not aware of the features that can actually help us carry out our daily routine tasks in a jiffy. Here are ten common but useful features of the Chrome browser. Some, that we are perhaps are aware of and some that will take us by surprise.

Incognito Mode

Do you hate when someone sneaks into your privacy? Me too. But Google Chrome understands your privacy and thus does not collect or save your browsing data while you surf in Incognito Mode. This feature of Google Chrome is very handy and you can enable it very easily. Either you can get into the Incognito Mode by clicking over three dots you see in your Chrome homepage on the upper right side and choosing 'New incognito window' or you can simply enter the command Ctrl + Shift + N.

Printing a Web Page

Users sometimes forget to bookmark an interesting page or an article they were reading and then struggle to find it later. There is a "Save webpages to PDF Files" feature in Chrome that does the work for you. Just press Ctrl + P and you have your favourite page saved as PDF.

Access Recently Closed Tabs

Another life saviour feature of Chrome is to restore the closed tab in a jiffy. And trust me, it is life-saving because many times either we accidentally closed the tabs or seldom the system being faulty does it. And we were left with nothing but to mourn over the loss. Not to worry now, as we do have an option to recover all those closed tabs again in a single go. This feature of Chrome can be accessed by pressing Ctrl + Shift + T.

Suggested Answer in Address Bar

If you're an impatient person, like most of us here, you would want your answers even before you finished asking your questions on your browser. The auto-fill address bar feature of Chrome is all you need to explore to this end. Chrome's address bar ultimately uses Google Search to make any search for the users fast and simple by auto suggesting searches depending on the first word or two of your search question.
