

to using the Beauty Mode on your smartphone. To turn it on, you need to click the Up arrow that lies next to Start Video. Click Video Settings and under My Video, check the box called Touch up My Appearance.

10. Record the meeting in your computer

Zoom is generous enough to let the users record video conferences onto their desktop or laptop. However, if one wishes to record it on a mobile device, then a paid subscription of the app is required. If you want to enable local recording, then you need to go to Settings> Recording and toggle on it. If you are hosting a Zoom meeting, then you can click the Record icon that lies on the bottom of the toolbar.

11. Record a meeting to the cloud

The paid version of Zoom has a great feature that lets users backup and records a video conferencing session in the cloud. All you need to do is tap the Record button located at the bottom of the toolbar. You can choose from the option that lets you store a copy of the recorded video conference in the local desktop or the cloud. You can avail of these features through your mobile or laptop.

12. You can host an extended session of group meeting beyond 40 minutes

The free version of the Zoom app has a time restriction where group meetings cannot last beyond 40 minutes. If you wish to have unlimited group time, then you need to register with a paid account.

13. Hosting more than 100 people

If you ever need to host a group of more than 100 people, you need to have a paid, professional account. An office or educational institution will benefit immensely as they can host close to 1000 participants.

14. Not limited to powerpoint presentations

The screen-sharing feature of Zoom can help you to share the screen of specific apps or the entire desktop for that matter. Few people are aware of the fact that Zoom meetings have a built-in whiteboard. It can help you communicate visuals and complex ideas.

15. The host has the authority to mute attendees

Generally, Zoom users are smart and have the awareness to mute large