

meetings. However, a few people might forget to mute themselves.

Hosts are often ignorant about the fact that they can mute attendees. If you desire everyone to join the meeting muted by default, you can accomplish it by toggling. In Zoom, you can mute participants on an entry in the Schedule Meeting section of Zoom's Account Settings. Click on Manage Participants. All you have to do is click the mic icon next to the person you wish to silence.

You must take note of the fact that attendees can unmute themselves, and there are ways in which you can manage a large meeting from becoming a chaotic non-sense. Participants can hold the spacebar to unmute themselves. Otherwise, they can open the participant's tab lying at the bottom of the zoom window and click the raise hand button to let the moderator know that they want to speak.

16. Make the most of Zoom's powerful scheduling features

Organizing meetings in Zoom is easy. It has useful scheduling features that you can link with iCal and Google Calendar. The scheduling set up screen provides well-thought-out options like "Begin the meeting with Video on or off." You can also dictate the permissible audio sources and if you intend to use Personal Meeting ID or a randomly generated room number.

17. Eliminate unwanted guests from the conference

There have been cases of uninvited guests entering meetings. Suppose someone can guess the URL of your meeting, jumps into the conversation uninvited, and puts him or herself on the camera. Its consequences can be alarming for the least.

In its twitter handle, Zoom has shared in detail the condensed version of what you can do as a host to prevent abuse or harassment. The jest of it is provided under the following points.

- Never share your meeting ID publicly. If you are hosting a public meeting then never use your meeting ID; instead, you can use a randomly generated Meeting ID.
