

when compared to the wonders of the real world. Participating in activities that are based out of the periphery of your electronics will help you make your perspective better. Needless to say, this will give you an edge over the others who decided to stick to the digital media only.

Disadvantages of overusing electronics

While there are a plethora of good things that can be attributed to the world of computers, there are quite a few negatives, too. Hence, it is important to be extra cautious about the disadvantages of digital media:

1. Cybercrimes, malware and malicious activities: You can sometimes find yourself trapped in an elaborate cybercrime devised by hackers. Although, they often target the people who are not so well versed with technology, the ones who know the real deal are also prone to falling prey to their activities. Moreover, there are properly planned activities aimed at the tech-savvy lot too. So, it is best to stay wary of such malicious activities online.
2. Staying glued to the computer is harmful: All tech-savvy people have this in common with one another, they are often found glued to their devices. While knowing how to use the computer is a big advantage, staying stuck up there can be harmful. Overuse of computers has shown to cause several physical ailments that include back and neck problems. Besides this, it can also cause a number of mental issues that includes Clinical Depression and Schizophrenia.
3. Might disconnect with the real world: The tech-savvy lot, as has been mentioned earlier, are found glued to their computers. While this is harmful to their physical and mental health, this can also endanger their relationship with the real world. It is good to be a part of the virtual media, but overdoing it can result in a strained relationship with the kith and kin. This is something that most techies or tech-savvy people suffer from regularly.

Things you can do instead

Now that we have mentioned why you should take a break from your electronics, and what disadvantages they have, you must be wondering what you should do instead. You might already have a few ideas up your sleeves and we encourage you to go ahead!

In case you are still lost, the following list will be of much use for you:

1. Spend time with your loved ones: We have already mentioned this