

briefly, but we'll go over it again. Your loved ones need your attention. They need to know that you appreciate their efforts to keep you up and running. They are the ones who help you through your daily routine and they deserve your absolute appreciation. Hence, you must spend some time with them. Engage in activities that you and your loved ones enjoy and you will find yourself forgetting about your electronics for a good few hours, or even a whole day!

2. Read a book: Books are precious treasures that not only give you the knowledge, but also give you company on the loneliest of days. However, with electronics taking up the spotlight, the importance of books has been shoved into a corner. If you take a break from digital media, consider

- spending some quiet time with a book and a cup of coffee.
3. Take up a new hobby: Hobbies are not mere methods to pass your free time. They become defining characteristics of your personality. In fact, they help you evolve into a complete individual. With the internet taking up most of your time, it can get tough to maintain your hobbies. Hence, when you take a break, spare some time to hone our talents and to make the most out of them.
4. Learn a new language: Being able to understand a new language helps you discover brand new things. Imagine the number of new books that you can read, all the songs that you can understand, and all the films that you can watch! It is a beautiful revelation that takes you a long way in life.
5. Travel to a remote location: Many of you have wanderlust and love travelling to different places. There is a charm of exploring a new city, a place that you knew only in books and in stories narrated by others. It becomes all the more exciting if it is a place cut off from the rest of the world. It brings you unimaginable peace that the electronics or the digital media cannot!
6. Tidy up your house: Cleaning up your house is yet another great and productive way of spending some time away from your electronics. It not only makes you feel so much productive, but it also makes your mother really happy!