

organisations worldwide and getting certified will surely validate your system administration experience and increase your credibility. You can get certified at <https://dgit.in/puppetcert>.

Learning DevOps is overwhelming and there are many benefits of applying DevOps philosophy and being a DevOps engineer. Integrating DevOps philosophy into production can reduce the production cycles, increase efficiency and also increase the product quality. DevOps engineers have to work with a lot of teams and integrate and manage different tasks together, this can make you increase your capability of handling multiple tasks together, as well as increase your communication and management skills.

The personal benefits of becoming a DevOps engineer are:

- Increased salary - DevOps engineers are one of the most highly paid professionals and shifting to this career can be very lucrative.
- Better career prospects - Industries are continuously increasing the adoption of DevOps practices and with this, the number of opportunities has also been increasing with time.
- Increased Collaboration - DevOps is a practice that makes collaboration a way of work, and will surely make you increase your soft-skills, teamwork and management skills.

We hope that we were able to make you understand what DevOps is and what is the job and role of DevOps Engineers. Shifting to DevOps can surely make you reap major benefits. Adopting and learning the tools that we mentioned will surely make you a better DevOps engineer and moreover, getting certified from the organizations that we mentioned above will make you stand ahead of other developers. 