

Experience and knowledge of automation testing framework – Knowledge and hands-on experience of scripting languages such as JavaScript, C#, Shell, are essential in order to execute the tasks efficiently. Besides these, Selenium is a popular tool for testing since it is compatible with the popular programming languages such as Python, Java, CSharp, Perl, Ruby and it helps to increase the productivity of the testing tasks.

How to get into this?

A degree in engineering, computer science is highly preferred. Other degrees which prepare you for this role are BCA/ MCA/ BSc Computer Science, etc.

Certificate from reputed third-party sources will definitely give your profile a lift in the eyes of the hiring managers.

Image Source: Vertical District

The average annual starting in India while starting out tends to range from INR 3,00,000 to INR 6,00,000. Many top MNCs such as Deloitte, PwC, etc. provide jobs in Software Testing to freshers.

The following are the tasks you have to do regularly as part of your job:

- Create and document test plans, execute tests, evaluate the results and create a report around the bugs and other issues, which will be shared with the team.
- Understand development methodologies, such as Agile or Scrum, and work with different test environments.
- Be a multi-tasker.
- Communicate, Communicate, Communicate! – via verbal, written and other mediums.