

status code along with displaying an error on the same system or server. The error rate accounts for the requests that are timed out.

The response time testing has crucial characteristics, which are average response time and maximum response time. Both of these components help users to understand how long they have to wait for the server to respond to the request. 