

you can utilise your touch device or mouse to do the same. In the case of a touch gadget, one can either use their finger or touch stylus for inscribing the equation manually on their touch device which then subsequently gets converted to text by Excel. You also have the options of erasing and editing your equations should you happen to commit any mistake while writing them.

New button for Ink Replay

If you are making use of ink in the Excel spreadsheets, you can now make use of the Ink Replay button in Excel 2019 to better grasp the course of the ink in your document.

Lasso Select tool

The Lasso Select feature in Excel 2019 is a free-form tool that allows you to select any particular portion of a drawing in ink that you wish to. Upon selecting the desired part, you can go ahead with manipulating that object according to your desired objective.

Changing ink drawing

By letting you convert ink annotations into shapes, this particular feature allows you to exercise the liberty of freehand drawing whilst simultaneously preserving the uniformity as well as the standardisation of Microsoft Office graphic icons.

Using Surface pen

By making use of the Surface pen feature, a user can conveniently choose an area in the absence of selection tool that is seen on ribbon. Once you have made your selection, you may use it to subsequently move, rotate and resize the object in consideration.

Better accessibility features

With every consequent update, Microsoft has always strived to enhance the user friendliness of its Office suite and thus make it more accessible to its users. Following are the list of features that have ensured better accessibility in Excel 2019.

One click fixes for accessibility issues

Accessibility Checker feature in Excel 2019 has been upgraded to offer its