

they go to set up an arrangement that suits their preferences.

Tagging people and creating slides together

When there's a collaboration, sometimes there is a comment for a specific person or persons only. Microsoft now allows mentioning people in any document, presentation, or spreadsheet for comment or feedback. An email is sent to the person mentioned with a link to the document and conversation.

You can assign tasks in office apps like Word or Excel by mentioning people. The task is then tracked through interactions and reassignments. The person mentioned can resolve the task when it is completed.

On Powerpoint, you can ask people to work with you on a slide directly from the app. This will come in handy when you have to work with someone on a presentation. You can also share the slide with them, without giving them the option to edit it.

Personal well being

With virtual work, we are missing some important elements of work life. Some enjoyed the calm that came with listening to music when commuting, while some enjoyed lunch breaks with co-workers.

While these things cannot be replicated virtually, there is a solution. Microsoft Teams allows you to schedule a virtual commute time, so that you can relax before you start work. You can also set up your lunch timing, so that you are not cramped for a time to eat lunch. It also provides insight into conflicts in a time schedule, so that you don't miss a meeting or a task.

Rewrite

Plenty of times, documents have to be written in a short time because of which we make small mistakes. A college student, nine out of ten times, will create