

a project just before the deadline. When that happens, syntax goes for a toss. It is in times like this when we need a little bit of help. The rewrite feature provides better suggestions to replace texts that you are doubtful about. This makes sure that you do not email a document that has syntax or grammatical errors to your professors.

Editor option

You can check your grammar, spelling, and much more with the Microsoft editor. The editor analyses the document, and offers suggestions for grammatical, spelling, and phrasing issues. There are two headings in the editor: grammar and clarity. The issues will be shown under these headings, for which suggestions will be shown. You can accept or ignore them. If you do not want to see a particular form of suggestion, you can click on 'Don't check for this issue.' Use the editor for an error-free document. This can be advantageous for college students, as professors are not too kind about grammatical errors.
