

fellow community members so that they keep interacting with your videos. Even if you discover bad criticism, you should learn to take them in a stride.

You can also use polls and moderators to gauge community reaction. Live broadcast streaming can be a great way to interact with your community to talk and discuss gaming and their expectations from your channel. You may also get offers to collaborate or promote specific channels. Again, here you have to understand if the collaboration can help your channel. Partnerships can be a great way to expand your community and create strong bonds.

Copyright: The Motley Fool

Game streaming

You must also be following other streamers on your platform. Many of them would already be doing better than you with more viewers. Try to catch their pattern and understand how they manoeuvre between their choices. By following other successful streamers, you will realise which games attract more audience and those that don't.

If your channel attracts an audience and is doing well, you will also get more offers to stream upcoming games. Gaming companies might approach you to play their games to reach more audiences. This kind of sponsorship can be a great deal for game streamers and should be welcomed. Several publishers might pay you for reviewing their games. But, you must stick with your branding principles, and you should know the deal beforehand. Stream the game if you are sure that it would fulfil your channel goals.