

with Streamlabs OBS. This means that the number of steps required to stream through Twitch and Facebook Gaming is now about the same, and it really depends on which platform you are more comfortable with. You need to create a Facebook Gaming account first, on doing which you will be provided with a stream key within 24 hours. Once this is done, you can enter the key into Streamlabs OBS and get going with streaming.

YouTube Gaming

You can also stream using YouTube Gaming. Similar to the step for Twitch, all you need to do is press the Share button and choose YouTube as your service of choice. Now, enter your account credentials and initiate the stream by clicking on Start Broadcasting. It is often wise to go through the settings that YouTube throws up before you click on Start Broadcasting and to check your internet connection.

Copyright attribution: The Verge

Xbox has been ramping up its streaming capabilities