

make a significant impact on your mind. But remember these are quite common and are deliberate attempts to disrupt your stream. You can either ignore them, laugh them off, or even give them a witty reply.

Other common kinds of trolls are racist or homophobic comments. These remarks must be taken as essential points as they might not affect you, but there are possibilities that they can affect a section of your audience, and you never know who you can be triggered by reading those comments. You must avoid such statements by setting up basic ground rules and talking to your moderators beforehand about such situations.

One problem faced by many female streamers is dealing with sexist comments. The majority of live game streamers are males, and generally, gaming is still considered a part of the boys club. Many comments are unnecessary and disre-

Copyrights: www.independent.co.uk

Ignoring trolls is the best way to avoid making things worse. However, if things go beyond control, the creator must seek help from the platform authorities.

Copyrights: www.pexels.com

Female streamers are the most targeted. Stringent actions must be taken against comments that are unnecessary and disrespectful.