

spectful towards the female streamers. It is better to ignore such remarks unless the hater becomes a stalker or the words turn sexual or too offensive. You must take action if they try to stalk you in real life or stop creating a nuisance in the comment section.

You can always contact the platform authorities to deal with cyberbullies who harass you.

Ways to moderate illicit content

It is necessary to lay down rules and regulations to maintain the decorum of the streaming platform. Even the streaming platforms like Facebook and Twitch have rolled out features to moderate people creating a nuisance. Certain disturbing elements also tend to spam the comment section by irrelevant comments advertising or sales promotions. Likewise, threads of violence must be taken seriously and should be considered zero-tolerance violations.

Copyrights: Fast Company

Social Media taking steps to moderate trolls

1. Mention clear rules in your profile

To avoid your audience from engaging in any undesirable behaviour, you must define a set of rules for your stream. This way, the viewers will be aware of the consequences and refrain from making inappropriate comments. No viewers will want to stay in a toxic place. Therefore, you have to set up guidelines for your community and model appropriate behaviour. Ensure your behaviour as a creator is in line with what you expect from your viewers as it will impact the kind of environment you're building. For the best streaming experience, it is necessary to create a friendly, safe, and positive experience for your viewers and you are the ones who have to