

Copyright Attribution - pandasecurity.com

A livestreamer

Next, you need to get involved in a community.

If you want to become one of the best game streaming celebrities, it's important to consider joining some gaming events. There are various famous gaming tournaments all around the world. Joining such events could quickly get you millions of viewers who will eagerly wait for your daily video streams.

Then, you need to start promoting your website. It can be done by creating articles for article directories, posting on message boards, and chatting in online chat rooms. Any place where there are a lot of people will do! However, you do need to remember that this can take some time. So you need to be patient.

Also, remember to seek out collaborations. There are multiple creators out there looking to stream with someone and you can talk to each other and arrive at a mutually comfortable streaming schedule. The key is just to keep doing it. Don't give up. If you follow through and put your time into it, you will eventually make a career out of being a game streamer.

Where to next?

Many game developers have used live streaming of games to provide customers with a teaser of what's to come and what all they're working with. So they're always on the lookout for more people to stream their games. Newbies don't usually get to charge money to do so and indie studios don't have the budgets to pay up. So there's always an avenue for upcoming streamers to