

seen countless studies for boardroom meetings wherein more than half the respondents accepted that they did various activities other than listening to the co-worker's presentation such as-

- Falling asleep (15%)
- Checking emails and other messages (35%)
- Sending text messages (50%)

We're pretty certain that you've indulged in many of these activities while listening to your teachers during online lectures. And the moment, the teacher calls you out, you get alert.

Livestreaming is more or less like the same. If you interact with your audience, the engagement factor for your stream goes up and that helps you with the platform's algorithm. Your stream will, in turn, be shown to countless more viewers because it is that engaging. There are many ways to accomplish this goal, right from live polling to asking the questions throughout and many more. You can follow through with this article, understand the guidelines, and make it easy for you to engage your audience.
