

sions like Twitch extensions, available for free to make the experience more engaging and winning for the viewer.

Legalities that You Need to Know

Live streaming is great fun, but you also need to pay attention to the country's laws and legalities from a broader perspective. It is a good idea to first get accustomed to the laws, rules, and regulations before planning a live streaming session. There are music clearances, artist clearances, content moderation, and other related issues.

Live streaming

Remember, every channel has its set of terms and clauses when it comes to copyright issues. YouTube has a strict policy for live streams. All third-party content that is featured on your live session is scanned. There would be a placeholder image placed on the stream, and you will get warnings. You would need to stop the third-party content from continuing with the stream or take a license from the owner to use in your stream.

Live Streaming on Smartphone

Similar is the case with Facebook live streaming and on Twitch. Your account can get suspended or shut down for violation of the TOS Agreement. The best is for you to be extra cautious when using third-party content and/or planning all of it in the right way.