

Who can add custom emojis

Discord server administrators allow users to customise and control the server by setting up roles for its members. Discord caps the total number of roles at 250, far more than most of the servers require. Each role has its own privileges, responsibilities, and freedoms. One of the most crucial aspects is that it can enable their desirable role through ‘emoji management’. If you are a server administrator, then you can go to the ‘Role’ section of the server settings, select one of the server roles, and scroll down to find out “Manage Emojis” toggle. For any desirable role, emoji management privilege can be made active so that the users in the same role can access emoji manager custom settings.

Note: The server administrators can also technically enable emoji management, particularly for ‘@everyone’ roles. However, this role cannot possibly access server settings, so the users will remain unable to manage emojis on the server.

How to make an emoji from any image

You can select any image you require as a custom Discord picture. It is convenient to find rectangular or square-shaped pictures, but you can also consider uploading transparent PNG images or animated GIFs. Discord follows through limited restrictions: Discord emojis are then resized to the aspect ratio of 128×128 pixels, and no file can be bigger than 256 KB in terms of size. The easiest way to make sure that custom Discord emoji can fit the specifications is to develop it yourself prior. You can use the discord emoji template, which can automatically resize a GIF or emoji you are uploading under the square format of 128×128 pixels.

You can also upload any short video or image clip. Some of the discord Emotes work brilliantly as the transparent PNG images and look more like emojis. Using the emoji template, you can select the “Erase” tool to remove the unwanted sections and finish the edges with a very precise tool. You are allowed to also add text content in your custom emoji. All you have to do is click on “Text” and customise the font, size, style, position, animation, and colour of the text. Once you are done with this step, you can simply click “export image” and “download” to save this emoji on your device.

If your account is not signed into the Discord emoji template, you have to sign in or sign up using your Facebook or Google account. Once you have signed in, the watermark will be removed from your final picture.
