

How to add emoji to a Discord server

If your position allows you to manage and organise server emojis, it only takes less than a minute to upload your own content. You can start by clicking on the arrow next to your server name and then select “server settings”.

Image Source: <https://www.digitaltrends.com>

How to make emojis

If the options are not visible to you, it means that your role has not allowed you to add emojis. You can go to the emoji tab in the server settings and choose the “upload emoji” button. You can now select the file you have built, and Voila! You have your custom Discord emoji, and it has been added to the emoji bank of the server.

Learn how to add emojis using the Emoji Menu, or upload your own emoji

It is easy to add emoji to the Discord text using the emoji menu or simply typing out the name. If you are the server owner or have permission to access its components, you can add your own custom emojis to the platform. One thing to keep in mind is that custom emojis can only be used on a specific server. If you want to access it through multiple groups then you can opt for a Discord Nitro subscription. Emojis are perceived as a significant shorthand for meaning and tone in any virtual conversation. It is a way of expressing or showcasing an immediate feeling. On the Discord platform, using emojis can be indispensable, and it is entirely dependent on the group or server you are in. Various aspects are required to understand before using emojis in Discord. The simplest option with using emojis is that they are accessible with any discord server account. To get this done, you are available with few options.

Initially, you can use the emoji menu on any of your desktop or browser applications. Now you have to open this menu using the grey smiley on your message box’s right side. In the mobile application, you can take on this smiley on the message box’s left side. The emoji menu has Discord exclusive and standard emojis, along with a section to keep track of which