

emojis you have used the most. The other option is, you can type the name of the emoji you are willing to use. It is because every emoji has its name, which is bracketed by colons. You can find the emoji through the emoji menu. Now you are left with another option where you can consider uploading your own custom-built emoji in your discord server account.

Adding a custom emoji

As long as your account has 'manage emoji' permissions or you are the server owner, you can easily head over to your Discord server and add around 50 custom emojis in your personalised space. You can go to the server settings and click on the emoji tab for uploading custom emoji. Any user on the server can see and use the emoji. However, you have to keep two things and mind that the name of emojis must have at least two characters, and they can only contain underscores or alphanumeric characters.

Another important thing is that each of the emoji must be under 256 KB in size. Your custom emojis are only significant on the server where you have uploaded them in the first place. However, if you have access to a Discord Nitro account, then you can use custom emojis on every group or server.

Animated custom emojis

In addition to around 50 static emojis, you will get around extra 50 slots for animated emojis if you have access to a Nitro account. You will require
