

the same name and size requirements in animated custom emojis as you have applied previously. Another interesting thing about custom emojis is that they get themselves sorted in reverse alphabetical order in the emoji picker. It means that the emotions will group under the similarly named Emotes section. You can use them in text conversations or as emoji reactions.

The process of adding emojis into a discord server account is convenient for the users, assuming that they have permission to add custom emojis. Discord server resizes images of up to 128×128 pixels so that the image can fit any required specifications. You have to keep in mind that even if you do not have a Discord Nitro account, you can use custom emojis in the server where they have been uploaded. You will be required to pay only for metro accounts to use them on the server and use animated images. To upload your own custom emojis, you have to use the Discord version on your browser or desktop. You can follow through the steps mentioned below to learn more about the process.

- Open the Discord server where you are willing to add custom emojis. now click on the down arrow, which is next to the server name in the top left corner of your screen
- Now you have to select server settings.
- Click on emojis in the left sidebar and now select on upload emoji
- Select your emoji and it's added to the discord server

How to integrate custom emoji into your Discord server from Windows or Mac platform?

It is not incorrect to claim that a Discord server can be customised to a great extent to serve the requirements of its users. One of the crucial ways to get this done is to add custom emoji into it. Discord server allows users to add emoji directly to the website or through the desktop or mobile application. A standard server has a limited number of custom emoji slots. In the previous section, we have seen how Discord Nitro accounts can help you to get access to maximum slots. To add or remove discord server custom emoji on Windows or Mac, you will need to be a server owner or administrator. You can add the emoji from the server setting menus on the Discord website.

You will be required to upload the emoji file from the local storage of your computer or device. If the emoji file can meet Discord requirements, then soon, it will be added to the animated emoji or emoji lists. Each custom emoji in the discord server comes with an alias tag. By default, this tag uses the file name of the emoji image. You can use this tag while adding an emoji to a message.