

that some of the servers have emojis and symbols in their text and voice channel names. If you are managing your own Discord, it gets very easy to add the emojis yourself. It is because emojis can easily be added to multiple categories, including text channel names, voice channel names, etc.

You can simply follow through the steps below and add custom emojis to your Discord channel names. Almost any custom emoji that is available in your browser can be added to the channel name.

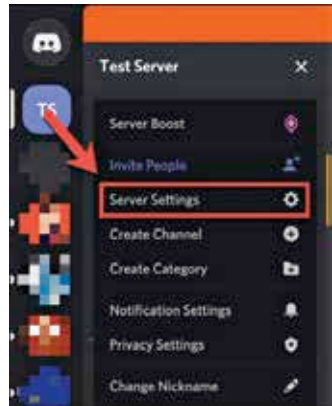

Image Source: <https://www.howtogeek.com>

Adding custom emojis to Discord server channel names

- First of all, you have to find custom emoji that you are willing to add to the channel name. A complete list of emoji will be available on the official platform.
- Now you have to copy the 'Emoji' browser column. You can copy this by selecting the emoji with your mouse and after pressing "CTRL + C" on your keyboard.
- Now you can go to the Discord server settings and right-click the voice or text channel whenever you want the emoji in its name. Select edit channel from the available drop-down menu
- Paste the custom emoji in the channel name section by pressing "CTRL + V" on your keyboard
- Save the changes, and you are done.

If you are not running out of time, then you can get creative with custom emoji server names.

Conclusion

No matter your origin or language, it is easy to recognise the emotion behind the blushing face or the sad emoji. On the discord platform, you can add emoji or symbols by yourself. You can also add the emoji as per the category name, channel name, or text channel name. All you have to do is follow the basic server settings, find the emoji that you want to add to your Discord server and paste the name in the corresponding field. You can also remove or delete the emoji through the Discord platform if you no longer require it on your server list. d