

event, then here is how you should do it. But before that, you should know how to create a community.

Steps to follow to set up a basic community

1. Creating a server

The first step to making a community in Discord is to create a server. But before creating a server, you need to pass the eligibility test, and that's "creating an account." This is probably the first step to create a community. Account creation is also super easy on Discord. When you visit the website, you will see the "register your account" option on the home page, and that's where you will have to click. As soon as you register and create your account on Discord, you can then either continue browsing on the website or simply download the application for comfort. The application is downloadable on laptop/desktop as well as smartphones. Now, once your account is set up then comes the fun bit where you get to create your first server. After account creation, when you enter the discord application, you will see a '+' symbol on the left side of your screen. When you click on this, you will be able to create your server. As soon as you click on this mark, there will be a pop-up that will appear on your screen saying, "Oh another server!", you have to click on the "create a server" button to complete the process. You will then be asked a few generic questions regarding the name and picture of the server. Fill them all in and proceed to the next step. Though it is completely your choice to name the server, it is recommended that when you select a name, it should be after your channel.

Creating a server on discord is super easy and super quick.
