

Managing Moderators

This chapter delves into moderator burnout, guidelines and much more

A moderation team is a collective of individuals from all around the globe with varied perspectives and varying perspectives, collaborating closely to not only establish a structure within a culture but cultivate the group as well. Managing such a team is a difficult challenge, but it is critical to the overall well being of a group. The purpose of leading a moderation team is to be fully accessible, collaborate with one another, and respond to one another. Make an effort to manage choices and address challenges in a considerate, rational, and competent manner. Allow mods to flourish by
