

Creating the Walk Cycle's Up Position

The final essential pose you'll need to master is the up position, which is when your body is at its highest point. When constructing your first walk cycle, your impulse may be to place the contact in the point when the hips

Establishing passing position are at their highest, but this isn't always the case. Because the body begins its fall on the contact position, the up position is usually slightly higher than the contact.

Lifting the foot up