

Pinetools

If all the individual tools could be packed into one website, then that would be Pinetools. This website has multiple tools for a wide range of applications such as mathematics, colour science, text and list manipulation, calculators, image editors, programming tools and even some file management tools. The service even has a simple suggestion box for you to let the developers know of handy little additions that could enrich the website and they just might build that into their arsenal.

Think of Pinetools as a Swissknife of sorts. In the same way that a swiss knife cannot compete with the likes of a bandsaw, these individual tools are also not that powerful but they are more than enough to handle some of the more common use cases and they do it well. Do you wish to subtract from dates? Or split a colour into a collection of complementary colours? Or perhaps, you'd want to convert tabs into spaces. Pinetools has all of that and more at your fingertips.
