

If you tap on them, more options to trim will appear. If the options are grey, move the video backward and forward until they light up. Trimming to the left side or right side of the playhead, split at playhead, and splitting and freezing-frame are all choices.

Adding a voiceover

After you've imported the media file, you will also want to add the narration. Don't be concerned if the voice recording doesn't start. It will begin when you select the voice recording start button. A green colour light will start blinking to indicate that your mic is on.

When you hit the Start button, portions of your project where the narration is included will be highlighted in red. When you hit the pause option, the red part of the video is replaced with a purple line. Other options include review loop, re-record, voice filter, trim and voice volume.

Adding some custom text to a video by KineMaster

Text addition to any video is very fundamental. To add and customise your words, click on the Layer option which is on the left side of the red colour camera button. When you click the selection, a new menu of choices will appear on the screen. The option to add text will be located at the bottom side of the page.

After you've finished drafting the text, click on the OK button. Now, your text will first seem little, but you can also enlarge it just by dragging it. By tapping it, you can also try to change the font style of the text. The text animation option allows you to introduce the text in many ways, such as slide up, slide down, drop, clockwise, and more.
